We Mourn the Loss of Profits.

GREAT FIFTY CENTS ON THE DOLLAR

SALE OF CLOTHING

We are going to make some improvements in our store room after January 1st. The contract is signed and sealed with the contractors—consequently we are compelled to sell our stock or pack it away. We prefer selling it at a sacrifice.

NOTHING RESERVED.

Every suit of Clothes, every Overcoat, every Pair of Pants marked in plain figures. We will just split them in half. This means 50 cents on the dollar. The cheapest sale of fine ready made Clothing in Kentucky.

Our business is not conducted by fakes and guessing schemes. The man that's selling watch chains on the street corner for $1, throwing in a watch just to show his generosity, needs watching. "Buncos Steerers," "Razzle Dazzle" tricksters and green goods sharps always promise great returns from small investments. Intelligent minds are on to the racket, and take no stock in such humbuggery. This value they want.

100 CENTS WORTH OF GOODS FOR 100 CENTS IN CASH

Is what we give the people. But at this sale

100 CENTS WORTH AT 50 CENTS ON THE DOLLAR!

Every article in our establishment is ticketed at the lowest price possible. The stamp of durability is on every garment.

If you have not dealt with us, ask your neighbor, who has. We invite you to our store, feeling assured that you will be pleased with our garments and satisfied with the matchless values we offer.

STATE SUNSHINE AND SHADOW.

The United States Court is in session at Covington this week.

LOUIS THORNTON was shot and killed by Wm. H. Williamson at Newport last week.

JOHN CAUFIELD, of Louisville, was last week stabbed by his son, with whom he had a quarrel.

JUDGE DELAHEN has been appointed by Gov. Brown to try the Moore-Shaw case at Elizabethtown.

MRS. LAURA ROGERS, who died at Lexington last week, left $100,000 to two Mississippi negroes named Warfield.

THREE persons died of diphtheria at Paris last week, viz.: Eli M. Kennedy, Simon Current and James Stephenson.

The Postoffice at Falmouth has been raised from the fourth class to a Presidential office, dating from Jan. 1, 1892.

A FIRE in Greenup County last week destroyed several shock of corn and hay stacks. It was the work of incendiaries.

GOV. BROWN has fixed February 5th as the date of execution of Wm. Puckett, for the murder of Henry Hall, in Estill County.

KENTUCKY cities of the fifth class were to send delegates to Louisville on Wednesday to confer about a charter for said cities.

JUDGE W. O. HARRIS, of Louisville, is prominently mentioned as the successor to John A. Minor, the veteran Professor of Law at the University of Virginia.

The remains of Major George W. Mc Kee, U. S. A., were incinerated at Samson's Crematory, near Pittsburgh, Thursday last, and the ashes were sent to Lexington for burial.

THE Town Marshal of Glasgow last week arrested three strange negroes at that place for holding up and robbing a man and attempting to rob Conductor Lloyd, of the Mammoth Cave Road.

THE Court of Appeals last week fell into line with the new Constitution, by the adoption of a rule ordering that all petitions for a rehearing shall be considered by a Judge other than the one who delivered the opinion in the case.

THE Three Forks Deposit Bank, of Beattyville, has brought suit against the Ohio Valley Improvement and Contract Company and the Louisville Trust Company, its assignee, for judgment on two protested notes of $1,536.45 each, and mechanical lien.

W. G. HOLLOWAY, one of the election officers in the Louisville City election recently, was last week arrested, charged with forgery, perjury and violating the election laws. So it seems, after all, that the kangaroo ball was not a success in the Falls City, at least.

ED POOL and Wm. Fisher, 14-year old boys, narrowly escaped drowning in the river at Louisville last Thursday. The current was too strong for them and drifted their frail boat onto the falls. The Life Savers went to their rescue and saved them by throwing out a rope.

THE trial of Wils Howard, the outlaw of this State, for murder in Missouri, was last week continued in the Lebanon (Mo.) Circuit Court until the February term. In the meantime Wils will remain in the St. Louis Jail for safe-keeping. There are 70 witnesses in the Missouri case against Howard.

THE Court of Appeals on Thursday last, in an opinion by Judge Lewis, affirmed the judgment of the City Court of Louisville in imposing a fine of $55 each against the Kentucky and University Clubs of Louisville for unlawfully keeping a club-room wherein malt and spirituous liquors are sold by retail without first having obtained the $200 license required in the city ordinance.

THE bondholders intend to ask Judge Barr, of the U. S. Court, to permit the Receiver of the Richmond, Nicholasville, Irvine and Beattyville Railroad, Mr. MacLeod, to issue certificates to the amount of $100,000 or $150,000, which, added to the $365,000 yet due in county subscriptions, will pay for the completion of the road. The construction company has contracted with Mallory, Cushing & Co., of Omaha, to take these unpaid county subscriptions and $100,000 more, making $450,000, to complete the road, and the Court will be asked to confirm this.

Seeing is Believing."

And a good lamp

must be simple; when it is not good. Simple, Beautiful Goods—these words mean much, but to see "The Rochester" will impress the truth more forcibly. All metal, tough and seamless, and made in three pieces only, it is absolutely safe and unbreakable. Like Aladdin's of old, it is indeed a "wonderful lamp," for its marvelous light is purer and brighter than gas light, softer than electric light and more cheerful than either.

Look for this stamp—THE ROCHESTER. If the lamp dealer hasn't the genuine Rochester, and the style you want, send us for our new illustrated catalogue, and we will send you a sample safely, to examine your choice of over 2,000 articles from "The Largest Lamp Shop in the World."

Egypt and the Nile Abandoned for Other Climes.

The Waters Over Which St. Paul Sailed—
Sermon by Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage, D.D.

Dr. Talmage took two texts: Acts xxii. 3, "When I had discovered Cyprus we left it on the left hand"; and, Revelation, i. 9—"I, John, was in the isle that is called Patmos."

Good-bye Egypt! Although interesting and instructive beyond any country in the world, except the Holy Land, Egypt was to me somewhat depressing. It was a post-mortem examination of cities that died 4,000 years ago. The mummies, or wrapped-up bodies of the dead, were prepared with reference to the resurrection day, the Egyptians departing from their mortal bodies to be kept in as good condition as possible, that they would be presentable when they were called again to occupy them. But if when Pharaoh comes to resurrection he finds his body looking as I saw his mummy in the museum at Bonac, his soul will become an unwilling tenant.

The Sphinx also was to me a stern monstrosity, a statue carved out of rock of red granite, sixty-two feet high and about 143 feet long, and having the head of a man and the body of a lion. We sat down in the sand of the African desert to study it. With a cold smile it has looked down upon thousands of years of earthly history—Egyptian civilization; upon the rise and fall of thrones innumerable; the victory and defeat of the armies of centuries. It took 3,000 years to make one wrinkle on its red cheek. It is dreadful in its stolidity. Its eyes have never wept a tear. Its cold ears have not listened to the roar of the great afflictions, the lament of which I tried to catch, last Sabbath. Its heart is stone. It cared not for Pilby when he measured it in the first century. It will care nothing for the man who looks into its imperious countenance in the last century.

But Egypt will yet come up to the glow of life. The Bible promises it. The missionaries like my friend, good and great Dr. Lansing, are sounding a resurrection trumpet above those silent sands. They are teaching another Joseph at Memphis. There will be some other Moses on the Nile. There will be a Hypatia to teach good morals to the degraded. Instead of a destroying angel to slay the first-born of Egypt, the angel of the New Testament will shake wakening life from his wings over a nation born in a day. When, soon after my arrival in Egypt, I took part in the solemn and tender obsequies of a missionary from our land, dying there far away from his home, and buried by his father, and saw around her the dusky and weeping congregation of those whom she had come to save, I said to myself: "Here is self-sacrifice of the noblest type. Here is heroism immortal. Here is a queen unto God forever. Here is something grander than the pyramids. Here is that which thrills the heavens. Here is that of which that will yet save us."

Good-bye, Egypt! This sermon finds us on the steamer Minerva in the Grecian Archipelago, the islands of the New Testament, and islands Paulinian and Joahonian in their reminiscence. What Bradshaw's directory is to travelers in Europe, and what the railroad guide is to travelers in America, the Book of the Acts in the Bible is to voyagers in the Grecian, or as I shall call it, the Greek Archipelago. The blue and gray map of that region is surrounded without a shadow of mistake. We are sailing this morning on the same waters that Paul sailed, but in the opposite direction to that which Paul voyaged. He was sailing southward and we northward. With him it was: Ephesus, Coos, Rhodes, Cyprus. With us it is reversed and it is: Cyprus, Rhodes, Coos, Ephesus.

There is no book in the world so accurate as the Divine Book. My text says that Paul left Cyprus on the left; we are sailing in the opposite direction, have it on the right. On our ship Minerva were only two or three passengers beside our party, so we had plenty of room to walk the deck, and oh, what a night was Christmas night of 1889 in that Grecian archipelago—islands of light above, islands of beauty beneath! It is a royal family of islands this Grecian archipelago; the crown of the world's scenery set with sapphires and emeralds and topazes and pearls, and abiding in its glory that seems let down out of celestial landscapes. God evidently made up his mind that just here he would demonstrate the utmost that can be done with islands for the beautification of earthly scenery.

The steamer had stopped during the night, and in the morning the ship was as quiet as this floor, when we hasted up to the deck and found that we had anchored off the island Cyprus, in a bay, which the natives had standing up in it, the town. Instead of sitting down to dinner, we were soon landed on the street where Paul and Barnabas walked and preached. Yes, when at Antioch Paul and Barnabas got into a fight—as ministers sometimes did, and sometimes do, for they all have imperfections enough to anchor them to this world till their work is done—when because of that bitter controversy Paul and Barnabas parted. Barnabas came back here to Cyprus, which was his birthplace. Island wonderful for history! It has been the prize sometimes won by Persia, by Greece, by Egypt, by the Saracens, by the Crusaders, and last of all, not by sword but by pen, and that the pen of the keenest diplomatist of the century, Lord Beaconsfield, who, under a lease which was as good as a purchase, set Cyprus among the jewels of Victoria's crown. We went out into the excavations from which Dr. Cesnola has enriched our American museums with antiquities, and with no better reason than our foot we stirred up the ground deep enough to get a tea-sottle in some morner laid his teats thousands of years ago and a lamp which, before Christ was born, lighted the feet of some poor pilgrim on his way. That island of Cyprus has enough to set an antiquarian wild. The most of its glory is the glory of the past, and the typhoid fevers that sweep its coasts and the typhoid fevers that sweep its cities, which often kill more than the Colossus of Rhodes (about $100,000) than the Colossus of Rhodes (about $100,000).

On our ship Minerva were only two or three passengers beside our party, so we had plenty of room to walk the deck, and oh, what a night was Christmas night of 1889 in that Grecian archipelago—islands of light above, islands of beauty beneath!

This is a had a wonderful history. With 6,000 Knights of St. John it stood out against 200,000 warriors under "Solyman the Magnificent." The city had 30,000 inhabitants, a statue to Apollo and Colossal, which has always been considered one of the seven wonders of the world. After twelve years in building and was seventy cubits high and had a winding stairs to the top. It stood fifty-six years, and then was prostrated by an earthquake.

After lying in ruins for nine hundred years, it was purchased to be converted to other purposes, and the metal weighing seven hundred and twenty thousand pounds, was put on nine hundred camels and carried away.

We were not compelled to go ashore, but the lights all up and down the hills show where the city stands and nine boats come out to take freight and to bring three passengers. Yet all the thousands of years of its history are eclipsed by the few hours or days that Paul stopped there. As I stood there on the deck of the Minerva, looking out upon the place where the Colossus once stood, I thought myself of the fact that the world must have passed many kind of paths—the human nature must have a superlatural arm to help it ashore—all the statues and images of heathendom are attempts to bring celestial forces down into human affairs. And the ears that we have heard of an ever-present God, and that through Jesus Christ He comes into our hearts and our homes, and with more than fatherly and motherly interest and affection He is with us in all our struggles and bereavements and vicissitudes. Rhodes needs something higher than the Colossus, and the day will come when the Christ, whom Paul was serving when he sailed into the region of Rhodes, shall take possession of that land.

It is to me an infinite pathos—the Colossus not only of Rhodes, but the colossi in many parts of the earth. This is only the world's blind reaching up and feeling after God. Foundered

As we move on up through this archipelago I am reminded of what an important part the islands have taken in the history of the world. They are necessary to the balancing of the planet. The two hemispheres must have them. As you put down upon a scale the heavy pound weights, and the small ounces, and one thinks to dispose of the small weights, so the continents and the islands the islands are the ounces. A continent is only a larger island and an island only a smaller continent.

Something of what part the islands have taken in the world's history you will see when I remind you that the island of Salamis produced Solon and the island of Chios produced Homer, and the island of Samos produced Pythagoras and the island of Coos produced Hippocrates.

But there is one island that I longed to see more than any other. I can't afford to miss the prince among the islands, but I must see the king of the Archipelago. The one I longed to see is not so many miles in circumference as Cyprus or Crete, or Paros, or Naxos, or Mytilene, but I had rather in this sail through the Grecian Archipelago than any of these, and the islands the islands are the ounces. A continent is only a larger island and an island only a smaller continent. Something of what part the islands have taken in the world's history you will see when I remind you that the island of Salamis produced Solon and the island of Chios produced Homer, and the island of Samos produced Pythagoras and the island of Coos produced Hippocrates.

A few express and inferior olives pump a living out of the earth, and one palm tree spreads its foliage.

But the bareness and gloom, and loneliness of the island. It is a prison for the banished evangelist. Demosthenes could not stand his ministry, and one day, under armed guard, that minister of the gospel stepped from a tossing boat to these dismal rocks, and walked up to the dismal cavern which was to be his home, and the place where should pass before him all the conflicts of coming time and all the raptures of a coming life. It is remarkable that nearly all the great revolutions before the time in which you sit must be made to men in banishment—Homer and Milton banished into blindness; Beethoven banished into deafness; Dante writing his Divine Comedy during the nineteen years of banishment from his native land; Victor Hugo writing his Les Misérables exiled from home and country and the bright sunlight of the future has been given to those who by sickness or some were exiled from the outer world into rooms of suffering. Only those who have been imprisoned by very hard surroundings have had great revolutions made to them. So Patmos, wild, chill and bleak and terrible was the best island in all the archipelago, the best place in all the earth for divine revolutions. Before the time in which you sit must be the room in which you sit must be darkened; and in the presence of John was to pass such a panorama as no man ever saw before or will ever see in this world, and hence the gloom of his surroundings was a help rather than a hindrance.

All the surroundings of the place affected St. John's imagery when he spoke of the beast. St. John's imagery was enforced abstinence or having no food except that at which his appetite revolted, think of Heaven; and, as the famished man is apt to dream of bountiful tables, covered with luxuries, so St. John says of the inhabitants of Heaven, "They shall hunger no more." Scarcity of fresh water on Patmos and the hot tongue of St. John's thirst lead him to admire Heaven as he says,

"They shall thirst no more." And as the waves of the sea wildly dash against the rock and each wave has a voice, and all the waves together make a chorus, and they remind him of the multitudinous anthems of Heaven and he says: "They are like the voice of many waters."

One day as he looked off upon the sea, the waves were very smooth, as it is to-day while we sail them in the Minerva, and they were like glass and a sunlight seemed to play upon them, and there was a mingling of white light and intense flame and as St. John looked out from his cavern home upon that brilliant sea, he thought of the splendors of Heaven and described them "as sea of glass mingled with fire." Yes, seated in the dark caverns of Patmos, though homesick and hungry and loaded with Domitian's anathemas, St. John was the most fortunate man on earth because of the panorama that passed before the mouth of the cavern.

Torn down all the lights that we may better see it. The panorama passes, and lo! the conquering Christ, robed, girded, armed, the flash of gold candlesticks and seven stars in His right hand, candlesticks and stars meaning light held up, and light scattered. And these passes a throne and

Christ on it, and the seals broken, and the woes sounded, and a dragon slain, and seven last plagues swoon and seven last are poured out and the vision vanishes. And we half

the night to rest from the exciting

spectacle. Again the panorama passes before the cavern of Patmos, and John the exile sees a great city representing all abominations. Babylon towered, palaced, templed, fountained, foliated, sculptured, hanging-gardens suddenly going crash! crash! and the pipers cease to pipe and the trumpets cease to trumpet, and the dust and the smoke, and the noise and the horror fill the canvas, until from out of the earth and beneath are voices announcing "Babylon is fallen!"

And we half again to rest from the spectacle.

Again the panorama passes before the cavern of Patmos, and John the exile sees a mounted Christ on a snow-white charger leading forth a cavalry of heaven, the long line of white chargers galloping through the scene,

the flash of hoofs, the clink

ing of helms, and the flash of spears, all the earth commuted in all heaven in doxology. And we half again to rest from the spectacle. Again the panorama passes before the cavern of Patmos, and John the exile sees great thrones lifted, thrones of martyrs, thrones of apostles, thrones of prophets, and a throne higher than all on which Jesus sits and ponderous books are opened, their leaves turned over, revealing names of all that have lived and died and the great and the renowned and the humble, the mighty and the weak, and at the turn of every leaf of the universe is in rapture or faint, and the sea empties its sarcophagi of all the dead of the sunken shipping, and the earth gives way and the heavens vanish. Again we rest a moment from the spectacle. The panorama passes before the cavern of Patmos, and John the exile sees the city of gold, and a river more beautiful than the Rhine and the Hudson rolls through it, and fruit trees bend their burdens on either bank, and all is surrounded by walls in which the upholstery of autumnal forests, and the sunrises and sunsets of all the ages, and the glory of burning worlds seem to be commingled. And the inhabitants never wear a sickness, never utter a groan, disease or difference, or frown, or wear a tear. The fashion they wear is pure white, and their foreheads are encircled by garlands, and they who were sick are well, and they who were old are young, and they who were bereft are reunited. And as the last figure of that panorama rolled out of sight I think that John turned back into his cavern, nervous and exhausted. Too much was it for naked eye to look at. Too much was it for human strength to experience.

Over Weeding Bush.

One of the eddies of English law and a way to get around it is illustrated by a case recorded of a bride appearing to be married in a church at Whitehaven.

As the story goes, when she had advanced a little way into the church the bridegroom began to undress her, until finally in only one undershirt she stood up before the priest. By the old English law everything that she owned—houses, or lands, or money, or jewels, or clothes—became the sole property of the husband as soon as the words were said that made them husband and wife. Hence this plan was devised to cheat any creditors who had any hope of securing payment by levying on the apparel of the bride. She must have been very anxious to get married when she contrived this scheme to marry a rascal and enter into such a scheme to cheat his creditors by securing the wardrobe to her husband.

Pittsburgh Dispatch.

Training for Modern Life.

Every man ought to know what kind of a man he is, what his relatives are to him, what and where invariable conditions are imposed, what in the nature of things is possible and what impossible, within what limits all that achievement must be, and hence what ideals he may consistently cherish that his work may not be in vain. It hardly need be said that neither literature nor art nor history nor theologies can do much for us.

Science. Only science can do—science is not a mass of facts, but as a body of relations. If there be anything that the ordinary man is markedly deficient in, and which the best schooling has not added to his mental equipment, it is his failure to see the necessities of science.

Exercise in logic and the study of mathematics have been supposed to qualify a man for scientific achievement, but by this is meant that for every effect to be explained a cause must be assigned, then most men are unequal to the occasion.—Prof. A. E. Dolbear, in Popular Science Monthly.

A man should hear a little music, read a little poetry and see a fine picture every day of his life, and in this world we may not obliterate the sense of the beautiful which God has implanted in the human soul.—Goethe.

Torn down all the lights that we may better see it. The panorama passes, and lo! the conquering Christ, robed, girded, armed, the flash of gold candlesticks and seven stars in His right hand, candlesticks and stars meaning light held up, and light scattered. And these passes a throne and

Christ on it, and the seals broken, and the woes sounded, and a dragon slain, and seven last plagues swoon and seven last are poured out and the vision vanishes. And we half

the night to rest from the exciting spectacle. Again the panorama passes before the cavern of Patmos, and John the exile sees a mounted Christ on a snow-white charger leading forth a cavalry of heaven, the long line of white chargers galloping through the scene,

the flash of hoofs, the clink

ing of helms, and the flash of spears, all the earth commuted in all heaven in doxology. And we half again to rest from the spectacle. Again the panorama passes before the cavern of Patmos, and John the exile sees

beautiful, the mighty and the weak, and at the turn of every leaf of the universe is in rapture or faint, and the sea empties its sarcophagi of all the dead of the sunken shipping, and the earth gives way and the heavens vanish. Again we rest a moment from the spectacle. The panorama passes before the cavern of Patmos, and John the exile sees the city of gold, and a river more beautiful than the Rhine and the Hudson rolls through it, and fruit trees bend their burdens on either bank, and all is surrounded by walls in which the upholstery of autumnal forests, and the sunrises and sunsets of all the ages, and the glory of burning worlds seem to be commingled. And the inhabitants never wear a sickness, never utter a groan, disease or difference, or frown, or wear a tear. The fashion they wear is pure white, and their foreheads are encircled by garlands, and they who were sick are well, and they who were old are young, and they who were bereft are reunited. And as the last figure of that panorama rolled out of sight I think that John turned back into his cavern, nervous and exhausted. Too much was it for naked eye to look at. Too much was it for human strength to experience.

HAZEL GREEN HERALD.
SPENCER COOPER, - - Editor.

HAZEL GREEN, KY.:
FRIDAY, Dec. 11, 1891.

BRIEF EDITORIALS AND NEWS NOTES.

ELSEWHERE we publish a call from J. E. QUICKSALL, Chairman of the Peoples Party for the Tenth Congressional District, for a meeting at Campion on Jan. 2nd, 1892, to effect a permanent organization in this district. We are not informed as to whether an attempt will be made to organize this party in other districts of the State, or not, but the defeat of the party suffered last fall, when Mr. QUICKSALL himself boasted that they would poll 100,000 or more votes and in all probability elect ERWIN Governor, should be sufficient to deter all sound thinking men from participation with it. "A bullet child dreads the fire," and we know of many who were badly burnt in this party movement last fall that can not now be induced to "touch it with a ten foot pole." Hence it is hard to see what object again prompts agitation of the matter now. Both Democrats and Republicans who were led off by the deceptive decoy, "Peoples Party" in the last August election, denounce it in unmeasured terms, and many Alliance organizations in the State have repudiated it. Again we ask, Who has an ax to grind?

A CRANK giving his name as H. D. WILSON entered the office of RUSSELL SAGE, the New York millionaire, on Friday and demanded the immediate payment of $1,250,000, threatening to kill everybody in the office unless the money was forthcoming. Mr. SAGE turned away from him and an explosion followed, by which a clerk in the office and the crank were torn to shreds, nothing of the latter being found but his head and legs. Mr. SAGE escaped with only slight bruises, though blown across the room. Subsequent investigation developed the fact that WILSON, who threw the dynamite bomb, was an escaped lunatic.

THE statement has recently been made in a special from Frankfort that "Gov. BROWN will stand by his friends." We are glad to hear this for it may mean much to us, as we were his friend during the time of "a friend in need." The tables are now turned, and we are the "friend in need." Reciprocity may perhaps prompt him to pass around the plum-pudding, or at least a left over scrap, and, remembering the fight we made for his nomination, we will nab our piece as soon as the plate reaches us.

THE news indicates that Mr. MILLS, of Texas, will be Speaker of the National House of Representatives. At this writing his friends in Washington are quite sanguine. The only obstacle between him and success, is Mr. SPRINGER, of Illinois, and it is thought that the forces of the latter will go to him in the final contest. That Mr. MILLS is the choice of the people is patent to all who have read the papers, and in our next issue we hope to announce that he is the man, and that the people have won.

GREEN R. KELLER, editor of the Carlisle Mercury, promulgates the following bit of interesting information: "The Kentucky Legislature meets on the 30th inst. Some of our exchanges have published that the Legislature meets on the 31st of December, but this is a mistake. The editor of the Mercury, as Clerk of the last House, will call the House to order Wednesday, Dec. 30, 1891, at 12 o'clock m., and if you want to be at the opening you had better be there that day."

TWELVE barges, cast adrift during a storm on the Hudson River Friday night, were capsized by the waves, and 20 persons drowned. There were 50 persons on board the barges, and the survivors saved themselves by clinging to the overturned boats or swimming ashore.

ONE of the worst snowstorms known in years visited the vicinity of Carlisle, Pa., Friday afternoon, where the loss will amount to $100,000. At Mechanicsburg 15 buildings were blown down, and through the country barns were wrecked and crops ruined.

GOV. BROWN on Friday pardoned JOSE ROACH, a little girl sentenced to the penitentiary from Ohio County.

MORGAN COUNTY.

Ezel Evolutions.

Died, on the 6th inst., at her home in Toms Branch, after a short illness, Widow Elizabeth Kash. She will be brought to the B. F. Cockrell graveyard for burial today. The writer had been acquainted with her for many years and takes pleasure in saying that she was an exceptionally industrious mother and a Christian lady of few equals.

Some of our Ezel boys who are attending school at Hazel Green, accompanied by Richmond DeBusk, were down on a short visit Saturday and report everything flourishing and satisfactory at school.

The school taught by Mrs. Mary F. Nichell, at this place, closed last Friday. She will go to Mt. Sterling this week, where she will make her future home.

Our fellow-townsman, Samuel Rice, recently fell heir to a sure remedy for hard times. Pension. See?

Benjamin Wages' wife, living on Blackwater below here, is very low, and her recovery doubtful.

Dec. 7. BLURT.

A Guaranteed Remedy.

MEGRIMINE, the only permanent cure for all forms of headache and neuralgia, relieves the pain in from 15 to 20 minutes. For sale on positive guarantee at THE HERALD office, or sent postpaid by mail on receipt of price, 50 cents a box.

First Official Call.

ELIZABETH, MORGAN COUNTY, KY., Dec. 10, 1891.—The voters of the several counties composing the Tenth Congressional District of Kentucky, who are interested in good government, will meet at the Court House of their respective counties on Saturday, Dec. 26, 1891, at 12 o'clock (noon) and proceed to organize a People's Party in said county, by first electing a Chairman and Secretary. They will then elect one Committeeman for each voting precinct; said Committee will then hold a meeting and elect one of their number Chairman, who, by virtue thereof, will be a member of the Tenth Congressional District Committee, and they will please meet at Campion, Wolfe County, Ky., on Saturday, Jan. 2, 1892, for the purpose of making a permanent organization; and the Secretaries of County and Committee meetings will please notify me at one of the action taken, giving names, etc., and give certificate of election to the persons elected, signed by the Secretary and Chairman. Secretaries will write me at once after such meetings, as other important communications are necessary.

J. E. QUICKSALL,
Chairman P. P. 10th Cong. Dist.
Papers in the district are requested to copy. Respectfully, J. E. Q.

DON'T neglect your cough! Ayer's Cherry Pectoral will cure it, and prevent consumption. Write J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.

FRANK TYLER requests us to announce that he is better prepared than ever to do blacksmithing, and at lower prices than anybody can do it.

DR. TAULBEE on Tuesday last removed a tumor weighing one pound from the neck of Mrs. Adams, of Morgan County, and the lady is doing finely.

FRANK PRESTON, representing Haynes, Henson & Co., Knobville, Tenn., is in town Wednesday, and sold H. F. Pieratt & Co. a nice bill of goods.

WHEN a lady desires a piece of nice dress goods it pays to buy it at a place where they handle the best. Cassell & Price, Lexington, Ky., is that place. *

THIS OFFICE needs money badly and all who owe us on subscription, job work or advertising, are earnestly requested to come in and settle up at once.

A YOUNG girl living on Stillwater, in this county, was severely burned one day this week by her clothes catching fire. We could not learn her name.

THE 10-year old son of Ernestus Turner, living on Frozen Creek, in Breathitt County, died of fever Wednesday week, and Mr. Turner is not expected to live.

JUDGE SWANGO came home Saturday wind up some unfinished business here, and reports Mrs. Swango and Charley well. He will probably return to Frankfort (today) Friday.

DR. TAULBEE reports the following birth: To the wife of George Barker, Hazel Green, a fine boy—Porter Wayne. He is named for A. Porter Lacy, of this place, and the famous detective, Billy Wayne.

JOHN HOWERTON, of this place, has the agency for Avery's Granite Chilled Plow, and is selling 'em like hot cakes. He has already sold to such men as Drury S. Godsey, R. D. Motley and several others.

THE HERALD and the Cincinnati Enquirer (weekly) will be sent to any address for one year for the small sum of $1.80. Two first-class papers for little more than the price of one. Send your subscription to this office.

OUR good neighbor, Mrs. Louis Wilson, has our thanks for a dish of nice sausage. "Aunt Louis" knows how to make it, and besides she has promised to learn our better way to make sausage pie. Then we'll feast. Yum, yum.

DR. TAULBEE reports last week, the following: Ten months' old babe of Jerry Combs as being very low, inanition; David Ross' child, seriously ill; Rev. D. H. Fallon is better, but yet very ill; Mrs. Portier reported as very low last week, is greatly improved; Jimmie Combs is under treatment for rheumatism and dislocated clavicle; Jeff Toliver, of Cox's Mill, has lamboigo, but under treatment will soon have a new back.

JOHN S. HARPER, writing us from Georgetown, Texas, under date of Nov. 28, tells of the death of old Uncle Billy Gillmore, at his house on that day. It will be remembered that Mr. Gillmore left here for Texas two or three weeks ago. Mr. Harper's letter states that in changing cars at Memphis, Tenn., he fell a distance of about eight feet from the platform through the car wheels, and received the injuries which resulted in his death 11 days afterward. He told those about him that he was prepared to go, and to his wife he said, "Mary, we will meet again soon." He was 71 years of age.

ALL who are interested in having a bank established at Hazel Green are requested to meet at the store of Rose & Swango on Saturday, Dec. 19, that steps may be taken for its establishment. Any man of limited means may become a shareholder, as he can take one or more shares. Indeed, this would be the preferable plan, for while it increases the number of shareholders, it at the same time insures greater interest in the success of the bank because a greater number will solicit for it. Let there be a rousing meeting, and let every man come prepared to take stock.

LADIES of this section can buy the finest cloaks, dress goods, blankets, curtains, holiday goods, etc., to be found in the State, by a visit to the store of Cassell & Price, 16 and 18 W. Main Street, Lexington, Ky. Their stock is superior to anything ever before shown in that city, and the firm assures us that the prices will be satisfactory to all purchasers. They handle first-class goods only, and sell strictly at one price.

Be sure and give them a trial. *

THE young ladies and young men of Hazel Green should consider themselves exceedingly fortunate in having the opportunity now afforded them of mastering both vocal and instrumental music. Miss Mollie Douglass is one of the most accomplished instructors in the State, and all who wish to take lessons, either vocal or instrumental, may do so at half rates. See Miss Douglass at once, and have her explain terms, etc.

THE following endorsement was handed us last week, but too late for publication:

"Our colored school which has been so successfully taught by our worthy teacher, P. E. Daverton, closed last Friday with one of the grandest entertainments ever given by this school, and we hope him success wherever he goes. COLORFUL CITIZENS."

OUR town was on Wednesday week terrorized by one George Marshall, who was drunk and went through the streets shooting his pistol and threatening to kill women and children. A posse followed him out of town and arrested him, and Police Judge Godsey bound him over to Circuit Court in sum of $200, which he furnished.

CASSELL & PRICE, Lexington, Ky., carry the finest line of dress goods in that city. A lady can take the morning train at Torrent, do her shopping at Lexington, and return on the evening train. The money she will save by buying of Cassell & Price will pay her fare, and she will have an enjoyable trip beside.

ON AN OLD WOMAN SINGING.

Sweet are the songs that I have heard
From green boughs and the building bird;
From children bubbling o'er with tune
With the sun upon their faces, and a swoon,
And surly bees hummed everywhere
Their drowsy bass along the air;
From masters and from hunting-horn
Piping the wild winds were the strain;
From boatsmen in amorous dusk,
Whose richer than a puff of musk.
The blossom breath they drifted through
Our brains, and we were filled with dew.
And sweet the strains that come to me
When in great moments I see
All that full-throated quiring strong
So streaming on the songs of song;
Hark! what a strain of woe now sounds
Bent with the Valthry's cry.
With golden clash of shield and spear,
Singing for only gods to hear;
And here the old woman bares
Bang "Angels Ever Bright and Fair!"
Her voice, her presence, where she stood,
Already part of angelhood.

But never have I heard in song
Sweetness such as here; no prole
Tells her—she has no voice rings
Along vibrating silver strings—
As when, with all her eighty years,
With all her strength, she quivered in tears,
A little woman with a look
Like some flower faded in a book
Lifted a thin and pining sigh
And said, "I have made a morn,
Forgetful that another heard,
And sang till all her soul was stirred.

And listening oh, what joy and grief
Trembled there like a trembling leaf!
The strain were first so thrilled the bars
That all the stars of the stars;
The murmur of soft bellables
Abode dear wanting eyes;
The longings where the human soul trod
The heights above the hills of God—
All on the quivering note awoke,
And in a sweet strain dissolved the woe.
The sweetest song I ever heard.—

CHAPTER IV.
THE BLATCHFORDS.

When old Farmer Green announced to the world that he had disowned and disinherited his son he felt he had put the finishing stroke to his duty. When he had done forth with the awful deed he ended his communication with the school, and privately despatched him out of its nests, fearing that his absence would be spurned.

Blatchford, however, cannot so readily be disposed of, since he figures in the narrative to the end, therefore it is necessary to go back and give a little further account of him.

At the time John and Mary married, Hiram Blatchford had been a widower for two years, and he remained so until after his daughter removed to Kansas. Still, at that event, he met Miss Sophie Speckler, a widow, and asked her to share his home. Miss Speckler having been on the matrimonial market for a good many years with no bidders for her hand, was desperate enough to accept any sort of offer, and accordingly she snapped Blatchford up in short order.

Miss Speckler was anything but pretty, and her temper was sour, and her first meet of the strangers could not have been in the Blatchford home a week, as Mrs. Blatchford, before she had her husband under her thumb, had held complete sway over everything and everybody about the place.

Blatchford was her slave from the first, and with him her word was law. Whatever she wished she had, and whatever she thought should be done was done without delay. She married Blatchford for his money, and she was determined from the first to have it.

A month or so after his marriage Blatchford began to study about his daughter, and the more he thought of her the more he became convinced that he had ill-treated her. In short, after so long a time he came to the conclusion that he was as much to blame as Mrs. Green, and that in view of his suffering penitence, he decided to extend to her the hand of friendship and offer to her and John some pecuniary assistance. Having come to this conclusion, he hastened to mention the matter to his wife for her sanction. Sarah listened until he had unfolded his plan, then with uplifted hands and staring eyes exclaimed:

"Well, did I ever hear of such a thing as that?" Hiram Blatchford, having you all yell your heads off."

"Whoa! Whoa!" Hiram replied, taking back "what's the matter?"

"Matter?" Sarah repeated. "Well, I'd never believed it, never."

"Never believed what?" Hiram asked.

"Why, that you could ever have been taken with such fool notions, Hiram. Whoever heard of the like of it?"

"Why, I—" Hiram stammered and stammered.

"Why, you," Sarah put in, "want to be a fool. Hiram Blatchford, a regular cut and out fool, you do. That's all there is of it. The idea of you making the first step towards a reconciliation between you and your daughter, when she threw you away for the sake of John Green. Yes, if I was you I would. I go and get down on my knees to her, and own that I was in the wrong. Yes,

I'd do all that, and beg her with tears to my eyes to come back to my arms." "Sarah, I—" "

"You know what you thought, Hiram. I know that your soft, silly heart prompts you to make a fool of yourself. But before you do it, ask yourself if it would be right. Wasn't you always kind and indulgent to Mary, and didn't you do everything for her that a father could do?"

"Yes, that's true," Hiram replied with a smile of secret satisfaction, and with a growing feeling that he was a much abused parent.

"Then you have done your duty, Hiram, more than your duty, and if anybody is to bind the knee let it be the one who has done wrong. I don't believe in a father being made a slave to the whim and wishes of an ungrateful child. If I had ever had such a father as that, I would have given him every wish even, I never would have forgotten myself. I couldn't ever look the world in the face after being so heartless and ungrateful. Oh! Hiram, what a noble, loving, forgiving nature you have, and how unfeling must have been the child who could so ruthlessly trample upon it."

At this point the good Sarah, who all along had shown symptoms of weeping, so overcome by the thought that could restrain her tears no longer, and broke down and poured forth in a perfect flood on her husband's shoulder. Hiram was deeply touched, and he was forced to exert himself to keep back the tears of self pity that welled up in his own eyes. He had never before realized how deeply he had been wronged, and when he did he understood how much he had been injured. His heart went out to himself, and he pitied himself from the bottom of his soul.

"There, there, Sarah," he said, "don't let the tenderness of your heart cause you to grieve too sorely for what I have been made to suffer. I promise you that I shall not forget my wrongs again soon, since the weakness that possessed me for a short time is gone. No, I'll never again be so foolish as to let any who so far forgot her duty to me and treated me with such cruelty, and I am glad that you recalled me to myself in time to save me from taking the step I had anticipated."

Sarah checked her tears and by degrees her sobbing ceased. The effort she had made had been a great one, and her soul was terribly sore from the effects of it, but she had saved her husband from abusing himself and sinking into a morose depression. Of course she had saved him from all expense on Mary's account and kept that much more money for herself, but that would not count for anything with such a noble soul as that of the angelic Sarah.

"Hiram," she said when she had got her feelings sufficiently under control to be able to cease her tears and sobs, "I hope I have not said too much. I am afraid that you might not understand my plan in your heart, and a girl should occupy in the heart of a man, and I know I would be the last person to aid in estranging you from her. Perhaps I have said too much, but I have your good so deeply at heart that I couldn't help saying what I did. It was all for the sake of your loving, generous self."

"I know that, Sarah. I do not misunderstand you. I know how it is for you to have to say such things, but you feel it to be your duty, and you do it. I thank you, my dear wife, with all my heart, for your disinterested sympathy of me.

Let us now drop the subject and try to forget it. It is not right that you should afflict yourself with thoughts of one who is so far beneath you in point of education and mind, and think her with as much charity as possible. It is a sad thing to feel the ingratitude of one's own flesh and blood—a sad thing to be a parent spurned by the child for whom I have done so much. But I can live over it,

Louise grew pensive and melancholy, and it was plain that she longed for a different life, though she never uttered a word to express her desire. Shortly after Christmas she and her mother were alone in the cabin, and after they had sat a long time silent Louise suddenly said:

"Mother, I wish I could manage some way to go on with my education."

"So do I, Louise," Mary answered; "but I can't think of any way that it can be managed."

"I could wish to go to school, but as well have been fifty miles away for all the good they were to Green's, for since that night when Markham talked so abusively to Louise there had been no intercourse between the two families."

"I could wish to go to school, but as well have been fifty miles away for all the good they were to Green's, for since that night when Markham talked so abusively to Louise there had been no intercourse between the two families."

Louise grew pensive and melancholy, and it was plain that she longed for a different life, though she never uttered a word to express her desire. Shortly after Christmas she and her mother were alone in the cabin, and after they had sat a long time silent Louise suddenly said:

"Mother, I wish I could manage some way to go on with my education."

HOME HINTS AND HELPS

—Lemon juice will whiten frosting, cranberry or strawberry juice will color it pink; and the grated rind of an orange strained through a cloth will color it yellow.

—Basted Poultry: Cut fine one pint of any kind of cooked poultry, and cook it for fifteen minutes in a sauce made the same as for creamed potatoes; but place the dish over boiling water when the meat is added.—Christian Inquirer.

—Pure glycerine is a new remedy for tea and coffee stains of long standing. It should be washed off and the linen washed and exposed to the air in the usual way. Most staining of the linen can be removed by soaking the spots in hot or cold skimmed milk. When strong bleaching fluids are used unless great care is taken the linen becomes tender and will bear but little washing thereafter.—N. Y. World.

—A Pilau: Take a large fine chicken and cover the breast with slices of fat bacon or ham secured by skewers. Put it into a stewpan with two sliced onions. Season it to suit your taste with pepper and salt, add a whole pint of rice that has been well rinsed, washed and soaked. Cover the fowl with it. Put as much water as will well cover the whole, stew it about half an hour or till the fowl and rice are thoroughly done, keeping the stewpan closely covered. Dish it all together either with the rice covering the fowl or laid round it in little heaps.—Home.

—French Pancakes: One pint of milk, three eggs, two cups sifted flour, two scantfuls baking-powder, two spoonsfuls sugar, beat the yolks of the eggs light, and pour the milk upon them. Sift the flour with the sugar and baking-powder, and add this alternately with the whipped whites. Have ready a heated griddle, and cook the latter on this in large spoonfuls. As each pancake is done, transfer it to a hot plate, spread it lightly with butter, the thick, jelly, and roll it up, the sweetmeat inside. When the rolls are neatly arranged on a dish, sprinkle them lightly with powdered sugar.—Harper's Bazaar.

—Sweet Potato Pone: Wash, peel and grate the best quality of sweet potatoes. Measure five teaspoonfuls into a large bowl. Into this stir three teaspoonfuls of the best molasses, two teaspoonfuls of butter (melt the butter carefully and do not let it get oily,) one cupful of preserved ginger, and one bit of citron that is prepared for eating; one cupful of preserved orange-peel, also chopped fine, one teaspoonful of pounded ginger and two tablespoonfuls of mixed spices. Mix all thoroughly together. Grease well a plain cake-pan; pour the pone in and bake in a moderately hot oven. Try it with a knife. When the blade comes out clear, remove from the oven. Let it get well cold before removing from the pan.—Boston Herald.

A Velvet Winter Ahead.

Fashion proclaims a velvet winter, which means a winter of luxury that will be a velvetone winter for those who can not afford the costly fancies of Lyons. The "Louis" velvetone is one of the very best makes which are upon the market. It is made in every conceivable shade, especially in the new tones of heliotrope, gray and blue. The dyes are admirable, whilst in surface it is silky and sheeny, and its weight is more easily borne than any other. In fact, during the evening season nothing would look better than a slightly-trimmed skirt, made "umbrella" fashion, to define the figure closely, and over it a three-quarter coat, opening with handsome lapels to display a waistcoat of rich brocade. Dressed in this manner a young lady would be at once fashionable in appearance, while she would have the agreeable consciousness of having effected a good bargain from a pecuniary point of view. It is worth noticing that strong foundation linings are supplied to match every shade of velvetone.—N. Y. World.

White Broadcloth Table-Cover.

A table-cover of white broadcloth is elegant. Take a square of one yard and a half, and decorate it with a conventional border design, set four inches above the straight cut edge. Work in long-and-short stitch in white or any delicate color of flossfloss; work the flounces with the same, and the long-and-short stitch, and enough to cover of medium-size gold thread around this. Do the stems in three rows of gold thread couched down, the stitches alternating. Couch the outside line of the leaf with the gold thread, and inside of this lay four lines, following the outline, and running each line inside of the other until the four rows are finished when the end of the cover is to be fastened after being drawn through. Line with India silk to the lower edge of the design. This is very Japanese in effect.—Ladies' Home Journal.

Capes for Evening Wear.

Some of the new capes of velvet for dressing evening wear are elegant and picturesque in appearance, and confer great distinction on the wearer if she be tall and slender. One model is of Venetian brown velvet, finished with a jeweled-trimmed collar, and with amber. Another of green velvet is lined with fawn-colored silk shot with pale green. The collar is covered with jet. Black velvet capes, made full all round and not gathered in at the back, are variously finished, and some are very gay in effect, being lined with vivid red, deep orange, bronze, pale rose armure or with a fancy-plaided silk, showing a rich mixture of Persian colors.—Chicago Post.

GRATEFUL—COMFORTING, EPPS'S COCOA

BREAKFAST.

By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful analysis of the properties of various substances, Mr. Epp's has provided our greatest babies with many heavy doctors' like remedies, but by the addition of such light, easily digested materials as weanlings can eat, he has built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. He has also provided a strong tonic around us ready to attack whenever there is any tendency to debility. It is a good drink by keeping ourselves well nourished with pure blood and strong, healthy tissue. It is a good drink for Convalescents, and for those who are weak and feeble. It is a good drink for children, and for those who are weak and feeble.

The story of An Editor.

AN EDITOR died and slowly wended his way to where he supposed a safe haven against the world. "Save him and me!" For many years thou hast borne the blame of the many errors the printers made in the paper. The paper has gone alas, for $1.00, and the $1.00 has failed to come in. The printers have deviled thus Saturday night for wages when thou hadst not one cent to give name. Men have taken their hats and caused thee to wait out a better time. Thus hast been called a dead beat by passenger conductors when thou hast shown the pass to envious gaze. All these things hast borne in silence. Thou canst not come here. And he fired him away. "Heaven is thy home, and besides if we let you come in here, you would be continually troubling our iniquitous subscribers—our 'hell' is full of them—and thus creates a disturbance in my kingdom."—Shelby Sentinel.

The readers of THE HERALD will be pleased to learn that there is at least one man in the country who is willing to care in all its stages, and that is to Carr. Carr's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Carrar being a constitutional disease, requires constitutional treatment. Carrar's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the cause of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address F. J. A Clean Sweep.

A SPECIAL from Frankfort says that the three Railroad Commissioners appointed under the Buckner administration will go when their commissions expire next June, and Mr. Brown has decided to appoint three entirely new men from among his own friends. It is said the app'tees will be, for the First District, Urey Woodson, the newspaper man of Owensboro; for the Second District, C. C. McChord, the lawyer of Washington County, and for the Third District, W. E. Kunkle, the attorney and corporation man of Bourbon County. It is said the Governor also intends to appoint a new man as Commissioner of Agriculture, to succeed Mr. Wilson, whose time expires in January. The Governor is evidently a believer in the political axiom that "to the victor belongs the spoils," and is playing it for all it is worth.—Mt. Sterling Gazette.

AN HONEST Swede tells his story in plain but unmistakable language for the benefit of the public. "One of my children took a severe cold and caught the croup. I gave her a teaspoonful of Chamomile Tea, and she was in better condition two hours later. I gave her more tea. By this time she had to cough up the gathering g in her throat. Then she went to sleep and slept good for 15 minutes. Then she got up and vomited; then she went back to bed and slept good for the remainder of the night. She got the croup the second night, but she was again relieved with the same good results. I write this because I thought there might be some one in the same need and not know the true merits of this wonderful medicine.—Chas. Thompson, Des Moines, Iowa, 50 cent bottle for sale by Rose & Swan, Gazebo.

The Oldest Man Living.

A MAN has been discovered in Preston County, W. Va., who, if the evidence he produces is authentic, is the oldest man in the country. His name is Isaiah Carpenter, and he claims to have been born in Loudon County, Va., in 1742, making him 107 years old. His history is short. He has no wife or children, and states that he drove a team in Bradflock's Army, and was acquainted with General Washington and other prominent fathers of the Republic. Mr. Carpenter's son, who died some 15 years ago, it is claimed was 100 years old, while his daughter, who resides in Maine, is a sprightly young miss of 83 summers.

"You are getting to be very fond of coffee, Mr. Hunker," said Mrs. Small to her star boarder, as he passed his cup up for the third replenishing.

"It isn't that, Mrs. Small," replied Hunker. "I'm taking the hot water tea-meal."

Sam Jones Will Speak in the Case.

Mrs. SAM SMALL, in a prohibition speech at Atlanta, made some allusion to a certain saloon keeper, who hunted him up and undertook to whip him. In the scrap Mr. Small had two teeth knocked out. Now he has sued the saloonkeeper for $5,000 damages, and Sam Jones asks for a renewal of his old newspaper, so he can make a speech to the jury in behalf of Mr. Small. That speech will be worth listening to; in fact it will be the sensation of Atlanta, and there won't be standing room within half a mile of the Court House the day he makes it.—Lexington Transcript.

THE laws of health are taught in our schools; but not in a way to be of much practical benefit and are never illustrated by living examples, which in many cases could easily be done. If some scholar, who had lost control of his health, could tell us what he did, we could all hear the dry loud cough, and know its significance; see the thin white coating on the tongue and, later, as the cold develops, see the profuse watery excretion and thin watery discharge from the nose, not one of them would ever forget what the first symptom of a cold were. The school should then be told, that all might see that even a severe cold could be cured in one or two days, or at least greatly mitigated, when properly treated, as soon as the first symptoms appear. A Caney Spot.

"WHAT DO YOU know about heaven?" asked an Edinburg Sunday school teacher of the smallest scholar in the class.

"It's where we go to when we die," replied the small scholar, who was not four years old; "and little girls can talk all day; they please, with no one to tell em to stop."—Edinburg Sevens.

Consumption Cured.

AN OLD physician, retired from practice, having placed in his office an English translation of the famous formula of simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma, and all Throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Delirium and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested 24 hours' wonderful curative power in them, and can have it at a trifling sum make it known to his suffering patients. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this recipe, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper. W. A. NOYES, $20 Powers' Block, Rochester, N. Y.

BROWN—Old Pecksniff is the most remarkable man I ever saw. He kept dinner running over 15 minutes, today while he said grace. Merrit! Yet I know when he holds a fellow's note he doesn't give him a moment's grace.

A GREAT many persons who have found no success in other treatments have been relieved of rheumatism by Chamberlain's Pain Balm. Do not give up until you have tried it. It is only 50 cents per bottle. For sale by Rose & Swango.

A Perfect Success.

The Rev. A. Autio, of Refugio, Tex., writes: As far as I am able to judge, your Nerve Tonic will be a perfect success, for anyone who suffered from a most painful nervousness as I did. I feel like myself again after taking the tonic.

JOHN A. REESE, JR.

A scholar in the M. E. Sunday school of which I am superintendent, I know was commonly epileptic for eight months, but since using Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic she attends school without any trouble, and is as active as I have ever seen or heard of, and this Nerve Tonic deserves the highest eulogies. It has my full endorsement.
